“ In addition to my earlier condolences, I would like to add, albeit late, examples of how truly generous a person Carol was. I remember her spending countless hours helping two of her classmates who were failing academically and not going to graduate prepare for make-up exams. In addition, she gave many of her text books to two undergraduates that I know of at no cost. She was also an inspiration to other undergraduates, offering words of encouragement and wisdom when asked.

Carol's family and friends can be justly proud of her commitment to helping those in need that, as I pointed out, went beyond her charitable work and generosity.

Again, RIP CA

It is perplexing that these two college classmates have yet to express their gratitude for Carol's generosity and selflessness - after all, her help was life changing.
