In Loving Memory of Dr. Davy Muth

January 1, 1952 – November 7, 2025

Dr. Davy Muth was born in Kandal, Phnom Penh, and arrived in Seattle in 1981, where she built a life of resilience, compassion, and service. A dedicated educator with a Ph.D. in Education, she became one of the first Cambodian principals in the United States, leading Wing Luke Elementary with wisdom, warmth, and an unwavering belief in the power of learning. She cared deeply about children, families, and the community she served. Teaching was not just her profession; it was her calling. A survivor of the Khmer Rouge, Davy helped her family and many other Khmer families safely immigrate to America. She was known for her intelligence, kindness, love of travel, and passion for hiking and personal health. Above all, she cared deeply for her family and community. She is survived by her siblings Rin Muth, Ren Sao, Sopha Muth, Paula Muth, Jack Muth, and Darika Muth (aka her daughter), and by her grandsons, Ethan and Jaden Oun. She is also survived by her nieces and nephews, along with her extended family. Her legacy lives on in the many lives she touched.

“ I met Dr. Muth as my son's principal at Fairmount Park, in W Seattle. She recruited me to come work with her there. We were a team and moved on to our next school, Wing Luke. I learned so much in my years with Dr. Muth. Not just about education... about life! She had experiences, intelligence and wisdom I cannot put into words. I will miss her. The world will miss her.
